

CLASS OF PAVING CAUSES PROTEST

Trenton People Want Asphalt but Will Get Vibrolithic

CANVASSED FOR JOB

Property Owners Allege That They Were Deceived by a Solicitor

Not all the protests against paving are based on the price, it developed at the city commission meeting Friday when one protest was entered because property owners alleged the person who solicited them for paving informed them their petition called for asphalt, when in fact it asked for the class of paving designated as vibrolithic.

This protest came from street improvement district No. 367, which is comprised of Trenton avenue from Twelfth to Seventeenth streets. Several property owners declared a petition was circulated among them by a representative of the paving company who first ascertained the paving desires of each property owner and then informed him the petition was for the class of paving he wants.

Majority Favor Asphalt.

It seems a majority want asphalt and though they were petitioning for it. When they finally discovered vibrolithic was about to be laid, and that the petition called for that class of paving, they immediately protested and asked that the contract be canceled.

This situation brought forth a brief speech from Water Commissioner A. J. Rudd who got a hearty hand from the crowd of spectators when he announced that he will vote for the lead paving contractor until it is definitely determined what kind of paving is wanted by the property owners.

"The class of paving desired should be settled before any petitions are presented to this commission," he declared, "and hereafter when the class is not designated on the petition I for one will not vote to let the contract."

Major H. F. Newblock condemned the alleged practice of paving contractors of sending solicitors among property owners in an effort to get signatures to petitions. "I am not in favor of the use of hired promoters," he said. "I think it is bad for contractors that use such men to obtain contracts as are not going to get any more work from this commission."

No More Petitions.

C. Roberts, a property owner on Trenton, also expressed his disfavor of such a practice. If property owners do not voluntarily petition for paving, it should not be given to them, he insisted.

H. Barney, local representative of the Vibrolithic Service company, told the property owners and the commission that he had sponsored the laying of vibrolithic paving on Trenton Avenue. He said he obtained no signers to a contract, but explained to all with whom he talked the advantages of vibrolithic, at no time telling anyone asphalt would be laid on that street.

"It would be inconsistent for me to recommend asphalt paving when my company recommends vibrolithic," Barney stated after the meeting.

Another heated protest was that concerning district No. 389—St. Louis avenue to Fifteenth to Nineteenth. This is the street from which the Oklahoma Union Railway company last winter removed its line.

It Is Protested.

The protest from that district was because of the price. Besides the protesters there were a number present who insisted that the paving be laid. Two petitions were before the commission, one from those who do not want the paving and one from those who do. Apparently the property owners are about evenly divided.

G. M. Linton led the fight for protesters. He declared the price is unreasonable and the contract should be canceled for that reason.

On the other side were Monty Haynes, R. W. Overton and W. J. Stewart. It was they who demanded the contract remain in force.

"For one want this paving laid immediately," Haynes declared. "I don't want to live out there in the mud for another 10 years, after which I won't be able to enjoy the paving if it is laid. We want paving and we ask that the commission let this contract stand. It appears to me that most of those who are protesting live close to Fifteenth street. That street is paved and they can do without paving on St. Louis."

Lent Paving Anyway.

Overton said one of his neighbors has his car in his garage last November, and had not been able to drive it out since then because of the condition of St. Louis. He also insisted that the contract remain uncancelled.

The hearings of protests in the districts were continued until next Friday.

Major H. F. Newblock expressed doubt whether the commission has authority to cancel contracts once let, and intimated it might be found that only a court action between property owners and contractor can settle the controversy.
